eight millions of envelopes yearly for telegrams alone—a quarter of a million a day.

Monument for Supposed Inventor.

A monument is to be erected in Nuremberg to Peter Henlein, the supposed inventor of the watch who died in 1540.

Journal for Conjurers.

Preparations are being made for the publication in London of a weekly journal written for conjurers.

Immense Bible Class.

The largest bible class in Great Britain is at All Saints' church, Sheffield. The average attendance is 1,600.

Will Not Publish Army Journal.

The plan of the British war office to publish an "army journal" has been abandoned. The official reason for the abandonment is that it would take "too much time."

United States Internal Commerce.

The value of the articles forming the internal commerce of the United States is estimated at about twenty-two billions of dollars in a single year.

Growth of Hair and Nails.

In every seventy years the average man grows a beard twenty-five feet long, hair almost fifty feet long and nails twenty-three feet long.

Cure for Colds.

People who go barefooted and those who wear sandals instead of shoes, it is said, rarely have colds in the head or any form of influenza.

Her Photograph.

Why a saint himself were not exempt From the spell of the lovely eyes that tempt.
So it's little wonder that I,
As I pause for a moment before the place
Where the frame is set with my sweet-heart's face,
Should thrill for a moment with just a trace
Of a lover's ecstasy!

But, ah, the insensate pasteboard knows None of the thrill or the fire that glows In the lips that answer mine;
And her black eyes lack the changeful light
That plays in her dusky orbs of night.
Steeping the soul and sense and sight
In the madness of old wine, But perhaps it is just as well that I kneel Before this shrine, though she may not feel
That I kneel as suppliant there.
This photo, at least, I may caress,
For her sire cares not that I effervesce
In this harmless style of tenderness,
And will not lie in wait on the stair!

How Millionaires Enjoy Themselves.

Twenty millionaires, impersonating farmers, have held a curious dinner in an hotel in Philadelphia. A miniature cornfield had been installed in the dining hall, and roosters ate wheat from the floor. The guests used toy pitchforks, rakes, and hoes, instead of knives and forks. A stuffed bull stood behind a rail fence, and two live pigs feasted in a sty. Farming utensils hung on the walls, and the electric lights were in pumpkins and melons.
When the company felt thirsty they went to a cider press, and farmer's wagons took them home.

Faker's Ingenious Device.

There was a man recently who did a tremendous business at French fairs, selling a powder that was harmless to men but deadly to rats. He would spread some of the powder on a slice of bread and eat it; then put a portion under a glass case, in which was a rat, that died as soon as it ate the bread. Here is the explanation of the trick. The powder was ordinary sugar. But the glass case was connected with an electric battery, and as soon as the rat touched the bread the current was turned on, and it was electrocuted.
